Chevrolet Trivia

What was the first Chevrolet to feature a rumble seat?

After the March meeting most of us drove the 1+ miles to the Nethercutt collection in Sylmar. Few of the attendees had never been there before. I bet they will return. Paul Millers '31 that he sold to them MANY years ago was not on display. I checked and they still own it.

Member question ..... please reply back.

What car did you take your 1st driving test?

If you took behind the wheel drivers training in high school, what car was it and was it automatic or stick shift?

The original Community Chevrolet sign ....
Who remembers where this was located? The part of the vehicle bottom left. I think I might know what and about what year it is, do you have a guess?

Update from Chuck Noble in Kentucky

Finished framing shelving and have one shelf finished, ran out of material or would have finished. Building a 12' wide by 10' high shelving from the scrap wood. Spacing shelves 24" and 24" deep Have everything primed and ready for paint. Hopefully this next week will finish painting walls.

Got my carburetor back today for the 54 so tomorrow will get it running, they did a great job, not cheap but the old guy builds old cars and has a state wide reputation. My arthritis in my hands is getting so bad I have trouble just holding a coffee cup so will have to send out a lot of work that usually I would do. Nearly finished burning out the 4' stump in the back yard, man is that wood hard, nearly burned out drills boring holes inside to get it to burn from inside my half in power drill had hard time drilling into this wood. Yesterday got a lot of it, I dumped 2 gal diesel into the holes and burned off a lot of brush from edge of woods and it is nearly to ground level so I could mow over it.

The Chevy truck is in the shop with major smog issues they estimate $4.000 once all is done. No diesel mechanics other than dealer within miles and the engine was about to shut down so had to take it to dealer. Also having mirror switches replaced as they stopped adjusting and the truck is due for oil change so glad we have some savings. This is the first repairs we had to pay for in over 140,000 miles.

Chevrolet Trivia Answer

The 1927 Sports Cabriolet was the first Chevrolet to feature a rumble seat.
